

Gifts of RRSPs & RRIFs

Thank you so much for considering giving the gift of your RRSPs/RRIFs to Food For The Poor Canada.

RRSPs and RRIFs are a great way of growing your wealth over time, but transferring the wealth to future generations can become difficult due to the heavy taxation surrounding this asset. Listed assets can only be transferred to a surviving spouse tax free, and can be transferred to children or other relatives once the assets have been taxed.

Leaving the gift of your RRSP or RRIF funds to Food For The Poor Canada, as a beneficiary can be advantageous, as you preserve proprietorship of the funds during your lifetime and you/your estate will receive a tax receipt for the value of the plan. As the donor, you can choose to donate all or a portion of your retirement funds.

Why Food For The Poor Canada?

Food For The Poor Canada is an organization that works in aid and development in the Caribbean and Latin America. We focus on five main areas of development and sustainability: building homes for families to thrive in, building schools for children to gain access to quality education, creating livelihood projects to help sustain families and individuals and provide business development opportunities, providing food to help feed families and children, and providing hospitals and clinics with needed health equipment and medicines. Our goal is to help strengthen and sustain communities, and we work closely with local partners where the aid is provided.

Over the years Food For The Poor Canada has built 30 schools, 80 homes, and delivered over $27,000,000 worth of food, medicines and educational supplies to Haiti and Jamaica. Your contribution ensures that we work to transform communities with sustainable and impactful projects.

Benefits of Donating RRSPs/RRIFs

- Your estate gets a charitable tax receipt
- Donors can name more than one beneficiary, which means that both your family and Food For The Poor Canada can receive a portion of the assets
- You are able to maintain ownership of your RRSPs and RRIFs during your lifetime, and still make a charitable contribution
